19 This matter comes before the Court pursuant to 20 Magistrate Judge Manibusan's Order setting a hearing date
21 before the Court for September 1, 2004. As this order meant 22 for the matter to be heard by the Federal District Court
23 Judge, Defendants' objections to Magistrate Manibusan
24 hearing the matter are obviated.

25 As a preliminary matter, this Court finds that the oral 26

1 arguments conducted on December 12, 2003 before Judge
2 Unpingco are sufficient and no further oral arguments
3 required. As such, Defendants' request to have a written 4 order submitted is GRANTED. The hearing date set for 5 September 1, 2004 is hereby VACATED.

6 I. BACKGROUND

7 This case deals with the termination of Tony Ashtiani, 8 a former airplane mechanic, from Defendants' Continental 9 Micronesia, Inc. ("CMI"), d/b/a Continental Micronesia, and 10 Continental Airlines, Inc. (collectively "Defendants")
11 employ. On July 3, 2001, Defendants terminated Plaintiff 12 Tony Ashtiani ("Plaintiff" or "Ashtiani") for violating 13 Continental's attendance policy by failing to report to work 14 for two consecutive days, and not calling in to his 15 supervisor. Plaintiff asserts eight causes of action 16 related to his claims of wrongful termination, 17 discrimination and unlawful practices by CMI.

18 On May 15, 2003, Ashtiani filed a Second Amended 19 Complaint ("SAC") asserting: (1) intentional infliction of 20 emotional distress; (2) negligent supervision; (3) unlawful 21 discrimination based upon race and national origin; (4)
22 intentional discrimination and intentional retaliation post-
23 9/11; (5) violation of Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993
24 ("FMLA"); (6) constructive termination; (7) wrongful 25 termination; and (8) sales of fraudulent insurance policies

26

1 by Defendant to employees<sup>1</sup>.

2 On November 21, 2003, Plaintiff filed a Motion for 3 Partial Summary Judgment as to six of the causes of action 4 (all but No. 5 and No. 8) and Defendants filed a Motion for 5 Summary Judgment on all eight causes of action. Both 6 parties filed oppositions on November 28, 2003 and replies 7 on December 5, 2003. The Court heard oral arguments on 8 these motions on December 12, 2003.<sup>2</sup> Despite having heard 9 oral arguments, however, the Court never issued an Order.
10 Therefore, these two summary judgment motions are currently 11 before the Court.

12 Also before the Court is the balance of Plaintiff and 13 Defendants' motions and cross-motions to strike documents
14 such as affidavits/declarations and exhibits. The Court 15 issued an Order on five of these motions on April 23, 2004.
16 A sixth motion to strike was denied on April 28, 2004.

17 Having considered all papers and argument in the 18 matter, the Court hereby finds and orders as follows:

19
20

21       <sup>1</sup> Plaintiff actually phrases this eighth cause of action in 22 the following way: "Sales of Fragulanet [sic] Insuarunce [sic] 23 Policies by Defendant to Employees." (See S. Am. Compl. at 16; see 24 also Pl.'s Opp'n at 18.) Defendants and this Court assume that, 25 instead of "fragulanet," Plaintiff means to say "fraudulent," and, 26 instead of "insuarunce," he means to say "insurance." (See, e.g., Defs.' Mot. at 18.)

2       <sup>2</sup> Judge Unpingco heard these motions, but never issued a ruling.

1       II. ANALYSIS

2       A. Summary Judgment Motions

3       For a party seeking summary judgment to succeed, he 4 must show that there exists "no genuine issue as to any 5 material fact and that [he] is entitled to a judgment as a 6 matter of law." FED. R. CIV. P. 56(c). Whether a fact is 7 material is determined by the governing substantive law.

8       Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.
9 Ct. 2505, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202 (1986). If the fact might affect 10 the outcome, then it is material. Id. If a party moves for 11 summary judgment on a claim or defense upon which it bears 12 the burden of proof at trial, it must satisfy its burden by 13 offering affirmative, admissible evidence. But, when the 14 non-moving party has the burden of proving the claim or 15 defense, the movant can meet its burden by pointing out the 16 absence of evidence submitted by the non-moving party. The 17 movant is not required to disprove the other party's case.

18       Khachikian v. Devry Inst. of Tech., No. CV 01-05935 NM, 2002
19 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3216, at *13 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 14, 2002)
20 (citing Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 325, 106 S.
21 Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed. 2d 265 (1986)).

22       If the movant meets its initial burden, the "adverse 23 party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of 24 the adverse party's pleadings, but the adverse party's 25 response, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this 26 rule, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a

1 genuine issue for trial." FED. R. CIV. P. 56(e). When 2 evaluating whether the non-movant's assertions raise a 3 genuine issue, the court must believe the non-movant's 4 evidence and draw all justifiable inferences in the non-5 movant's favor. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 255.

6 Here, the Court finds that there is no genuine issue of 7 disputed fact as to the causes of action. As such, the 8 Court can proceed with determining the summary judgment 9 motions.

10           1. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

11        "Intentional infliction of emotional distress by 12 extreme or outrageous conduct requires 'conduct exceeding 13 all bounds usually tolerated by decent society, of a nature 14 which is especially calculated to cause, and does cause, 15 mental distress of a very serious kind.'" Abuan v. Gen.
16 Elec. Co., No. 89-00031, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8334, at *13
17 (D. Guam Feb. 25, 1992) (quoting W. PAGE KEETON ET AL., PROSSER 18 & KEETON ON THE LAW OF TORTS § 12, at 60-64 (5th ed. 1984)).
19 Most cases require actual physical injury, but some courts 20 allow recovery "'if the enormity of the outrage itself 21 carries conviction that there has in fact been severe and 22 serious mental distress, which is neither feigned nor 23 trivial.'" Id. at *13-14 (quoting KEETON, supra, § 12, at 24 64)). Generally, headaches, insomnia, anxiety, and 25 irritability are not "severe" enough injuries to support a 26 cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional

1 distress. Id. (citing Standard Wire & Cable Co. v. Ameri-2 Trust Corp., 697 F. Supp. 368 (C.D. Cal. 1988)).

3 Plaintiff claims that Defendants "negligently" created 4 a "hostile work environment for an employee through verbal 5 abuse, imposition of totally unreasonable job assignments,
6 requirements, refusing to investigate Plaintiff's complaints 7 in any meaningful manner ...." (SAC ¶ 21.) However, these 8 acts by Defendants do not amount to outrageous conduct.
9 Also, Plaintiffs may allege that Defendants' discrimination 10 caused him to suffer severe emotional distress. But, some 11 courts have declined to recognize claims for intentional 12 infliction of emotional distress when the employer's conduct 13 causing such emotional distress also forms the basis for a 14 discrimination claim. See, e.g., Hansen v. City of Seattle, 15 No. C98-41WD, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6665, at *13 (W.D. Wash.
16 Jan. 25, 1999) (stating that "[a] claim for emotional 17 distress is not cognizable when the only factual basis for 18 the emotional distress claim is also the basis for a 19 discrimination claim"). Accordingly, the Court DENIES 20 Plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment on this 21 claim and GRANTS Defendants' motion for summary judgment on 22 this claim.<sup>3</sup>

23 _____
24 <sup>3</sup> This Court has previously held that the exclusivity
25 provisions of Guam's Worker's Compensation Law, 22 GUAM CODE ANN. § 26 9106, preclude recovery under tort action for intentional infliction of emotional distress by an employee against an employer for any injury arising out of and in the course of employment. Tolentino v.

1                   2. Negligent Supervision

2         "To state a claim for negligent supervision, a 3 plaintiff must allege that: (1) an employer had a duty to 4 supervise its employees; (2) the employer negligently
5 supervised an employee; and (3) such negligence proximately
6 caused the plaintiff's injuries." Ofoma v. Armour, No. 97 C 7 6420, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11052, at *10 (N.D. Ill. June 8 22, 1998).

9         Plaintiff asserts that this claim "arises from many 10 cover-ups, which occurred, between Maintenance supervisors, 11 which will be proven during the trial. Defendant 12 Continental knew, or reasonably should have known, that 13 Maintenance supervisors were engaging in the unlawful 14 behavior described herein and above." (SAC ¶ 23,26.)

15         Plaintiff also alleges that CMI knew or should have 16 known that "Mr. Hammer was not fit to act as the grievance 17 officer to hear, investigate, and remedy complaints in 18 wrongful termination [and] harassment in the work place

20         _____
21         Greenhill, Inc., No. 00-00001, at *8 (D. Guam Apr. 10, 2001).
22         However, in Shelly, the Superior Court of Guam allowed a claim for 23 intentional infliction of emotional distress by an employee, or former 24 employee, against an employer, or former employer. No. CV1373-95, at 25 3-5. Shelly also stated that Guam's Worker's Compensation Law does 26 not preclude recovery for "'a claim for emotional and psychological damage, arising out of employment ... where the distress is engendered by an employer's illegal discriminatory practices.'" Id. at 7 (quoting Accardi v. Super. Ct., 21 Cal. Rptr. 292, 298 (1993)).
Although these holdings contradict each other, the Court need not explore the issue since Plaintiff cannot establish a prima facie case.

1 ...." (Id. ¶ 24.) Plaintiff's claim appears to center on 2 allegations that employees of Defendants' acted negligently
3 by doing things such as assigning Plaintiff to carry heavy 4 objects. Plaintiff asserts that Defendants, as employers, 5 had a duty to supervise their employees to ensure that they 6 reasonably carried out their duties. Plaintiff, however, 7 offers no evidence that Defendants negligently supervised
8 their employees. Rather, Plaintiff only points to evidence 9 that employees themselves may have acted negligently.
10 Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff fails to 11 establish a prima facie case of negligent supervision.
12 Therefore, the Court DENIES Plaintiff's motion for partial 13 summary judgment on this claim and GRANTS Defendants' motion
14 for summary judgment on this claim.<sup>4</sup>

15                   3. Unlawful Discrimination Based Upon Race And 16                   National Origin

17

18                  <sup>4</sup> Defendants also argue that Guam's Worker's Compensation 19 statute covers injuries by employers, including those that give rise 20 to a claim of negligent supervision. (Defs.' Mot. at 9.) Guam's 21 Worker's Compensation covers any "personal injury by accident arising 22 out of and in the course of ... employment...." 22 GUAM CODE ANN. § 23 9104 (2003). Employer liability under this statute is "exclusive and 24 in place of all other liability of such employer to the employee...."
25 22 GUAM CODE ANN. § 9106 (2003). However, in Shelly v. Cont'l 26 Micronesia, Inc., the Superior Court of Guam allowed a claim for negligent supervision by an employee, or former employee, against an employer, or former employer. No. CV1373-95, at 11-13 (Sup. Ct. Guam Sept. 17, 1997). Therefore, it is unclear whether Guam's Worker's Compensation Law bars this claim. Nevertheless, because Plaintiff has failed to demonstrate a prima facie case, the Court need not decide this issue.

1       The Ninth Circuit "has set a high standard for the 2 granting of summary judgment in employment discrimination
3 cases." Schnidrig v. Columbia Mach., Inc., 80 F.3d 1406
4 (9th Cir. 1996). When a plaintiff "seeks to establish a 5 prima facie case [of discrimination] through the submission
6 of actual evidence, very little such evidence is necessary 7 to raise a genuine issue of fact regarding an employer's 8 motive; any indication of discriminatory motive ... may 9 suffice to raise a question that can only be resolved by a 10 fact finder." Lowe v. City of Monrovia, 775 F.2d 998, 1009
11 (9th Cir. 1985).

12      For a plaintiff to win a Title VII claim of disparate 13 treatment, he must first demonstrate a prima facie case by 14 offering evidence that "give[s] rise to an inference of 15 unlawful discrimination." Tex. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs v.
16 Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 253, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207, 101 S. Ct.
17 1089 (1981). For discrimination claims, a plaintiff must 18 show that: (1) he is a member of a protected class; (2) he 19 was terminated from a job for which he was qualified or was 20 subjected to an adverse employment action; and (3) others
21 not in his protected class received more favorable
22 treatment. Despanie v. Henderson, No. C 00-3028 CRB, 2001
23 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2572, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 5, 2001).
24 After establishing a prima facie case, the burden shifts to 25 the employer to present legitimate reasons for the adverse 26 employment decision. Brooks v. City of San Mateo, 229 F.3d

1 917, 928 (9th Cir. 1999). If the employer succeeds in 2 carrying this burden, then the burden shifts back to the 3 plaintiff to show that a genuine issue of material fact 4 exists as to whether the employer's purported reason was 5 pretext. See Bradley v. Harcourt Brace & Co., 104 F.3d 267, 6 270 (9th Cir. 1996). Pretext is defined as requiring 7 plaintiff to prove employer's reason(s) false and 8 intentional discrimination to be the real reason for 9 discharge. Saint Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, 509 U.S. 502, 10 515-16 (1993).

11 The Court finds that Plaintiff meets the first prong 12 for a prima facie case for discrimination, because he is 13 Iranian. As for the second prong, it is undisputed that 14 plaintiff was terminated. It is, however, disputed as to 15 whether Plaintiff was qualified for his job as an aircraft
16 mechanic. Plaintiff offers two letters and an affidavit 17 commending his work performance. (Pl.'s Reply ¶ 31 & Ex.
18 O.) These letters, however, date back to 1994 and 1997 19 (four years prior to Ashtiani's termination). As for the 20 third prong, Plaintiff argues that others, not in 21 Plaintiff's protected class, were treated more favorably.
22 Plaintiff asserts that at least three others "of different 23 race and nationality" also technically violated Defendants' 24 attendance policy, but that they were not discharged.
25 (Pl.'s Mot. ¶ 23.) As the standard for a prima facie case
26 is very low, Plaintiff meets this standard and the burden

1 then shifts to the Defendants.

2       The Court finds Defendants meet their burden by 3 contending that Plaintiff's termination resulted from his 4 violation of Defendant CMI's attendance policy. Plaintiff 5 allegedly violated the policy on June 23 and 24, 2001, when 6 Plaintiff did not appear for work and did not call a 7 supervisor to notify the company of his absence those days
8 and to obtain approval. (Defs.' Mot. at 3-4.) Defendants 9 argue that this put Plaintiff in the last stage of 10 discipline, resulting in termination. When Plaintiff failed 11 to attend a meeting on July 2, 2001, to explain his 12 absences, "Continental then terminated Ashtiani on July 3, 13 2001, for his no-shows on June 23 and 24, 2001." (Id.) As 14 Defendants met their burden, the burden then shifts back to 15 the Plaintiff.

16       Plaintiff argues that this reason is pretext because 17 others, not of Plaintiff's protected class (Middle Eastern 18 or Iranian), also did not personally notify a supervisor of 19 their absence. (Pl.'s Mot. ¶ 23.) However, of these 20 employees who did not personally notify a supervisor of an 21 absence, Plaintiff states that he was the only one who was 22 discharged. (Id. ¶ 24.) Also, Plaintiff claims that he did 23 actually call the company, and he did notify the recipient 24 of his telephone call that he would not be present at work 25 on June 23 and 24, 2001. Plaintiff further claims that the 26 recipient of his call then notified a supervisor of 1 Plaintiff's absence. (Id. ¶ 8 & Exs. B & C.) Additionally, 2 Plaintiff offers proof that it was commonly accepted by 3 employees that they could notify a non-supervisor of 4 absences, and that non-supervisor would relay the message to 5 a supervisor. (Pl.'s Opp'n Aff. ¶ 13 & Ex. I.)

6 In addition, Plaintiff refutes Defendants' further 7 justification for firing him-his absence from the July 2, 8 2001, meeting-by offering proof that three days before the 9 meeting, Defendants had already started to prepare 10 Plaintiff's "final paycheck." (Pl.'s Mot. ¶ 15 & Ex. I.) 11 Thus, Plaintiff says, the July 2 meeting was a "staged 12 theatre." (Id. ¶ 15.) Plaintiff also states that he and 13 his former attorney tried to obtain information regarding 14 the purpose of the meeting, but Defendants refused to inform 15 them. (Pl.'s Mot. ¶¶ 12-14 & Exs. F, G, & H.) Furthermore, 16 Plaintiff offers proof of discrimination in his claim that a 17 supervisor stated "that after the recent event of 9-11, 18 'That Tony Ashtiani would never work around these aircraft 19 again if he could do anything about it. Because he could 20 not trust people like Mr. Ashtiani.'" (Id. ¶ 30 & Ex. N.)
21 Finally, Plaintiff offers evidence that CMI engaged in a 22 cover-up through the declaration of a CMI employee who 23 reviewed Ashtiani's records and stated that the "difference 24 between [Defendant CMI's] various documents is highly 25 unusual, and causes one to wonder if the 10/30/01 P-138 was 26 to try to make records agree with the termination letter,

1 rather than reflect the actual reason for absence." (Pl.'s
2 Opp'n Aff. Ex. N.)

3 Despite such proffered evidence, the Court finds that 4 the only proof of pretext offered by Plaintiff is the anti-5 Iranian statement made by a supervisor. That statement, 6 however, was made after the events of 9/11 (September 11, 7 2001) which was more than two months after Plaintiff was 8 discharged. As a result, it fails to meet the burden for 9 pretext. Accordingly, the Court DENIES Plaintiff's motion 10 for partial summary judgment on this claim and GRANTS
11 Defendants' motion for summary judgment on this claim.

12           4. Intentional Discrimination, Intentional
13           Retaliation Post 9/11

14 Since Plaintiff already raises a Title VII employment
15 discrimination claim, the Court limits this cause of action 16 to retaliation. A party claiming retaliation must show that 17 (1) he engaged in activity or opposition protected by Title
18 VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, (2) his employer 19 subjected him to an adverse employment decision, and (3) a 20 causal link existed between the protected activity and the 21 employment decision. Folkerson v. Circus Circus Enter., 22 Inc., 107 F.3d 754, 755-56 (9th Cir. 1997); 42 U.S.C. §
23 2000e-3(a) (2003).

24 To support this retaliation claim, Plaintiff points to 25 alleged cover-ups by Defendants. For instance, Plaintiff 26 claims that on July 10, 2002, "[D]efendants concealed

1 crucial information, and statistical data in reference to 2 number of terminated employees, all minorities, by shifting 3 months, and not responsive to EEOC requests of specific 4 months in question." (Pl.'s Mot. ¶ 34.) However, these 5 alleged retaliatory acts occurred after Defendants had 6 already terminated Plaintiff's employment. In fact, 7 Plaintiff words this claim as "Retaliation Post-9/11," which 8 the Court infers to mean post-September 11, 2001, a date
9 more than two months after Plaintiff was discharged.
10 Therefore, the factual basis for this claim concerns alleged 11 acts by Defendants directed to a former employee, and cannot 12 constitute adverse employment action. Accordingly, the 13 Court DENIES Plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment
14 on this claim and GRANTS Defendants' motion for summary
15 judgment on this claim.

16       5. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993

17       The Family and Medical Leave Act ("FMLA"), 29 U.S.C. § 18 2601 et seq., "entitle[s] employees to take reasonable leave 19 ... for the care of a child ... who has a serious health 20 condition ..." 29 U.S.C. § 2601(b) (2). An employer shall 21 not "interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of or 22 the attempt to exercise, any right provided under this title 23 [29 U.S.C.S. §§ 2611 et seq.]." 29 U.S.C. § 2615(a) (1).
24 Further, an employer shall not "discharge or in any other 25 manner discriminate against any individual for opposing any 26 practice made unlawful by this title." 29 U.S.C. §

1 2615(a)(2). FMLA benefits are available only to an 2 "eligible employee," which means an employee who, during the 3 previous 12-month period, has been employed for at least 4 1,250 hours of service with his employer. 29 U.S.C. § 5 2611(2)(A)(ii).<sup>5</sup>

6 Only Defendants move for summary judgment on this 7 claim, arguing that Plaintiff does not qualify for FMLA 8 benefits because he is not an "eligible employee" since he 9 only worked about 800 hours<sup>6</sup> during the period of June 27, 10 2000, to June 27, 2001, (Defs.' Mot. at 14), and so failed 11 to meet the 1,250-hour requirement.<sup>7</sup> To prove this 12 contention, Defendants offer for the Court's review

---

13       <sup>5</sup> To determine whether the employee has been employed for 14 1,250 hours of service, the legal standards of the Fair Labor 15 Standards Act of 1938 ("FLSA"), 29 U.S.C. § 207, are to be applied.
16 29 U.S.C. § 2611(2)(C). Under FLSA, only the hours actually worked by 17 the employee are considered. Rockwell v. Mack Trucks, Inc., 8 F.
18 Supp. 2d 499, 502 (D. Md. 1998). Neither paid leave, e.g., for vacation, holiday, or illness, nor unpaid leave are credited to the 1,250 hours total. Robbins v. Bureau of Nat'l Affairs, Inc., 896 F.
Supp. 18, 21 (D. D.C. 1995).

19       <sup>6</sup> Defendants argue that Plaintiff only worked 80 days-equivalent to 800 hours of service-during the relevant 12-month 20 period. (Defs.' Mot. at 14.)

21       <sup>7</sup> Defendants also assert three additional reasons Plaintiff is 22 not entitled to FMLA benefits: (1) Plaintiff failed to provide proper 23 certification of his son's illness due to the absence therein of information pertaining to the start of the illness, the duration of 24 the illness, and the length of time necessary for Plaintiff to care for his ailing son, (Defs.' Mot. at 13 & Ex. P); (2) Plaintiff's son 25 did not suffer from a "serious health condition," but was instead
"asymptomatic," (id.); and (3) Plaintiff untimely submitted the certification to Defendants because Defendants received it on July 10, 2001, one week after Plaintiff lost his job (Id. at 13-14).

1 Plaintiff's absentee records for the years 2000 and 2001.
2 (Id. Exs. E & F.) But, the information contained therein is 3 difficult to decipher, as not all letter codes used on the 4 calendars, particularly "D," a check mark, and what appears 5 to read as "FTR," are explained in the code key. Also, 6 Defendants claim that Plaintiff worked 61 days in 2001, yet 7 none of the codes utilized individually amount to 61, which 8 adds more uncertainty as to what code signifies a day
9 Plaintiff actually attended work. Therefore, Defendants' 10 evidence showing ineligibility fails to convince.

11       Although Defendants have failed to prove that Plaintiff 12 was not an "eligible employee," the burden rests upon 13 Plaintiff to prove his eligibility to FMLA benefits. See 14 Rockwell, 8 F. Supp. 2d at 502. However, Plaintiff offers 15 no proof that he worked the requisite number of hours for 16 FMLA eligibility. Therefore, the Court finds that Plaintiff
17 has failed to demonstrate a prima facie case satisfying 18 FMLA. Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Defendants' motion for 19 summary judgment on this claim.

20                 6. Constructive Termination

21       To survive summary judgment on a constructive 22 termination claim, the non-moving party "must show a triable 23 issue of fact as to whether 'a reasonable person in [his] 24 position would have felt that [he] was forced to quit 25 because of intolerable and discriminatory working 26 conditions.'" Bergene v. Salt River Project Agric.

1     Improvement & Power Dist., 272 F.3d 1136, 1143-44 (9th Cir.
2     2001) (quoting Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co., 25 F.3d
3     1459, 1465 (9th Cir. 1994)).

4         Plaintiff has failed to make such a showing since 5     Plaintiff did not quit or resign from employment but was 6     actually terminated by Defendants. (See, e.g., SAC ¶ 14.)
7     Therefore, the Court DENIES Plaintiff's motion for partial
8     summary judgment on this claim and GRANTS Defendants' motion 9     for summary judgment on this claim.

10              7. Wrongful Termination

11         Plaintiff appears to state a claim of wrongful 12     termination in violation of the duty of good faith and fair 13     dealing, by citing to California cases raising such a claim.
14     (See Pl.'s Mot. ¶ 20; Pl.'s Opp'n ¶ 22 (citing Cleary v. Am.
15     Airlines, 111 Cal. App. 3d 443 (Cal. Ct. App. 1980); 16     Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co., 9 Cal. 3d 566, 580 (Cal.
17     1973))). In Flores v. Hawaiian Rock Prods. Guam, however, 18     the Superior Court of Guam held that Guam "does not 19     recognize claims for breach of the covenant of good faith 20     and fair dealing in the employment context ...." No.
21     CV8120-02, at 10 (Super. Ct. Guam Aug. 8, 2003).
22     Nonetheless, Guam does recognize a claim for wrongful 23     termination in violation of public policy. See Flores, No.
24     CV812-02, at 5-6. If, however, the public policy violated 25     deals with the FMLA, then Plaintiff's claim is be denied, 26     because FMLA provides an adequate remedy. See Cavin v.

1       Honda of Am. Mfg., Inc., No. 02-3357, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 2 20722, at *37-38 (6th Cir. Oct. 10, 2003). Therefore, the
3 Court DENIES Plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment
4 on this claim and GRANTS Defendants' motion for summary
5 judgment on this claim.

6                   8. Sales of Fraudulent Insurance Policy

7       For Plaintiff to succeed on a claim of fraud, he must 8 show: "1) a misrepresentation; 2) knowledge of falsity (or 9 scienter); 3) intent to defraud to induce reliance; 4) 10 justifiable reliance; [and] 5) resulting damages." Trans
11 Pac. Exp. Co. v. Oka Towers Corp., 2000 Guam 3, 16 (2000)
12 (citing Milne Employees Ass'n v. Sun Carriers, 960 F.2d 1401
13 (9th Cir. 1991)).

14       Only Defendants move for summary judgment on this 15 claim. In opposition to Defendants' motion and in support 16 of this claim, Plaintiff argues that Defendants' Human 17 Resources benefit department doctored an application form 18 for converting his employee insurance into an individual 19 insurance policy. (Pl.'s Opp'n ¶¶ 50-52.) Defendants 20 allegedly changed the amount stated in the application form
21 from $250,000 to $500,000, in order to match Plaintiff's 22 $500,000 employee insurance policy. (Id. ¶ 52 & Exs. V & 23 X.) Plaintiff also claims that the insurance policy offered 24 by Defendants is not valid in Guam. (Id. ¶ 52.)
25 Furthermore, Plaintiff contends that he and the families of 26 deceased Guamanian/Pacific Island employees were "deprived

1 of their benefits and being discriminated by the wealthy 2 corporation such as defendants," as Defendants "put the 3 money right in their pocket books as additional profit in 4 the corporation ...." (Pl.'s Opp'n ¶ 54.)

5 In contrast, Defendants defend the validity of the 6 insurance policy it offered to Plaintiff and to all 7 Continental employees, and argue that, if the policy is 8 invalid, Defendants lacked knowledge of its invalidity, "as 9 the policy is ultimately issued and handled by AIG [the 10 carrier], not Continental. Continental simply acts as an 11 intermediary in offering the policy and plan to its 12 employees." (Defs.' Mot. at 14.) Defendants also furnish a 13 supporting affidavit and letter defending the validity of 14 the insurance policy as held by Defendants' Guam subscribers 15 and noting that a $500,000 employee policy may be converted 16 into an individual insurance policy. (Defs.' Mot. at 5 & 17 Ex. R.)

18 Based on such proffered evidence, the Court finds that 19 Plaintiff fails to establish a prima facie case, since he 20 cannot, with the facts offered, demonstrate the elements of 21 misrepresentation, knowledge of falsity, intent to defraud 22 to induce reliance, and resulting damages. Therefore, the 23 Court GRANTS Defendants' motion for summary judgment on this 24 claim.

25 B. Motions and Cross-Motions to Strike

26 As this case has been disposed of in its entirety, this

1 Court DENIES as moot the balance of motions and cross-
2 motions to strike evidence.
